

Tim Ryan

Tim Ryan sits on Pipeline Integrity Group International's Board of Advisors and provides business development services to the company and is President and CEO of Celtic Consulting.

Tim was a high ranking leader in the United States Congress for 20 years where he represented the working class communities of Northeast Ohio. He led efforts to expand the natural gas industry in Ohio and America, and the building and construction trade unions that support that industry. Since he left Congress, he has continued this work by co-chairing Natural Allies for a Clean Energy Future with former Louisiana Senator Mary Landrieu, former Philadelphia Mayor Mike Nutter and former Miami Congressman Kendrick Meek.

Natural Allies is one of the top natural gas advocacy groups in the United States. Tim works closely with the top CEOs in the U.S. natural gas industry, and their workforce, to expand pipelines, ensure American gas is the cleanest and safest in the world, and facilitate partnerships with renewable energy companies. Tim believes that safe and affordable energy is the backbone of economic growth, expanding job opportunities, lifting up working class people and ensuring America's national security.

In addition to his work in energy, Tim is actively engaged in the technology sector. He currently works with Coinbase, helping to shape the future of cryptocurrency policy and innovation. He also serves on several advisory boards focused on artificial intelligence, where he contributes strategic insights on the intersection of technology, regulation, and the American workforce. Tim is the author of two books, Healing America and The Real Food Revolution, which reflect his broader interest in public health and systemic reform. While his current focus is on energy and emerging technologies, these works underscore his commitment to forward-thinking, people-first solutions.

A lifelong Ohioan, Tim lives with his wife Andrea, their three children - Mason, Bella, and Brady, and their two dogs, Bear and Buckeye. He enjoys his son in youth sports, practicing hot yoga, and playing golf.
